About The Seminar

Apiculture is the practice of rearing of bees for the purpose of extraction of Honey, bees wax, etc. Besides its nutritive food value, honey also has medicinal value. Because of this, humans have been using honey and its products since time immemorial.

Traditionally, the collection and extraction of honey have been by crude means and methods. This caused destruction of the colony and precious time was lost in rejuvenating the colony. However, with the advent of modern scientific methods, the advantages and benefits of bee-keeping are aplenty.

The main objective of the seminar is to impart knowledge on the importance, scope and economic as well as ecological benefits of apiculture. The aim of the seminar will be to impart first-hand technical and practical knowledge to the participants who in turn are expected to be agents and advocates for the practice of apiculture in their respective places. At the same time, the seminar will also focus on the role of honey bees in alleviating ecological issues like global warming and climate change. The seminar also aims to serve as a platform to research scholars/ academicians enabling them to present their research papers/findings.

About the College & Dept.

Patkai Christian College was established in August 1974. In 1975 Patkai was provisionally affiliated to North-Eastern Hill University (NEHU) and permanently affiliated in 1986. From 1994 Patkai has been affiliated to the Nagaland University (NU).

The NAAC accredited Patkai Christian College at the B++ level in 2004 and re-accredited the college at A level in 2010. It is the only college in the entire Northeast to be granted autonomy by the UGC till date.

The Department of Zoology was started in 1992 with the introduction of Pre-University under NEHU. It was one of the first departments to be upgraded to full degree course with honors in 1997 under NU. The Department has been identified as one of the “Star Department” under the CPE status by the college.
